Antonio Tarsis at Carlos/Ishikawa

Like his predecessor, the Brazilian modernist Lygia Pape, the young Brazilian artist Antonio Tarsis carries on in the tradition of the found and readymade object through his compositions made of matchboxes commonly seen in the favelas of Salvador, where the artist grew up. Tarsis dismantles, dissects, and dyes the matchstick boxes to create a stunningly diverse body of work full of socio-political context on poverty and class, as well as art historical references to the Modernist grids of Agnes Martin. The wall-hung works were paired with assemblage sculptures referencing the improvised fire or coal-burning stoves commonly found in Brazil.
